WEDNESDAY NOVEMBER 4, 1903

It would seem to be a difficult thing to keep a man down by writing him up.

A very fat man, trying to back-pedal onto solid ground, is one of the funny after-election sights. The cat-dodo editorial had a great deal more recoil than was bargained for.

THE CHILTON MATTER.

Much is being made of the fact that Papa Chilton denies that his son stated that he (Chilton Perre) was voting for Cathcart, as was stated in the Bulletin yesterday. Chilton does not deny that he voted for Cathcart, which would seem to be the meat in the coconut. The facts of the matter are, briefly, these:

The Bulletin was informed that Chilton, Jr., had stated that he and his family were going to vote for Cathcart, and, on being questioned by a reporter, Chilton, Jr., confirmed the report, and was quoted as saying so.

After the publication of the paper containing this article, Papa Chilton came to the Bulletin office in an overbearing state of excitement, and denied absolutely that his son had ever made any such statement, and asked for a correction. A short statement of what he had to say was made out in his presence and read to him. It was pronounced satisfactory by Chilton, and was published.

But the most significant fact of all is that, after Chilton, Sr., had left the office, Chilton, Jr., stayed behind long enough to state, in the presence of three witnesses, that he had made the statement to the reporter, and had merely denied making it to escape the wrath of his parent.

THE ELECTION.

The battle is over, the smoke is clearing away, and the combatants are figuring out their victories and losses. It would be idle to say that the Republican party can be absolutely satisfied with the result; but it is to be hoped that the evils of split-ticket voting have on this occasion been so amply illustrated that in the future those who call themselves Republicans will understand the necessity of standing by the ticket from top to bottom, regardless of personal prejudice, in order that the principle of the party—a thing much higher than the personality of the candidates—may be carried through.

It is highly satisfactory that Kuhio has been elected, assuring the Territory of efficient and efficient representation at Washington, and giving a solid basis on which to place hopes that the prosperity which has reached Hawaii from Washington may be continuous. It is true that Kuhio's majority has been reduced, but in view of the fact that the Democrats looked upon this election as their one great chance, the fact that McCandless was beaten by a good, solid majority, shows clearly that the community is satisfied with his work. Furthermore, in view of the bitter attack on the land policy, which was the chief shot in the Democratic locker, the vote for Kuhio may well be taken as a vote of confidence in the Administration.

However, what is undoubtedly the most significant thing of the entire election, is the election of John Cathcart to the office of County Attorney by a vote almost twice as large as that of his two opponents together. The result is gratifying, demonstrating, as it does, the fact that the community of Oahu will not stand for any such campaigns of slander and vilification, unfair and cowardly, and fattered by personal hatred and malice, such as was directed against Cathcart by the morning paper. Cathcart could ask for no better vindication than that which has been given him at the hands of the majority of the voters of Oahu.

Speaking of the results of the election as a whole, the fact that several candidates for local County offices have been defeated, should not be permitted to so obscure the vision that the result should be called in any sense of the word a Republican defeat or anything like it. On the contrary, the most important office, that of Delegate, has been refilled by a Republican, and the majority of the Senate and the House will be Republican, thus assuring us that the Administration will have the support which it needs from the Legislature. Even on the County ticket the Republicans have preserved the sway, having absolute control of the Board of Supervisors, the governing body, so that even if some of the executive officers of the County are Democrats, the Republicans possess the real power.

Last of all, the fallacy of the running of independently has never been so amply demonstrated as in this case, and it is to be hoped that the utter rout of every one of the independents, several of whom had been victorious at the polls while running under party banners, may bring into the lines of party those who have been advocating the cause of independents in the past.

SUFFRAGETTES MOBBED THEM

London, October 13.—The climax of the suffragette campaign was reached tonight, when an enormous mob hemmed in Parliament and stopped traffic in all streets leading to Westminster. For more than three hours the crowd scuffled good-naturedly with the police, interfered with theater-goers, broke windows and disorganized things generally in the center of London.

The heroine of the day was Mrs. Travers Symons, formerly secretary to James Keir Hardie, the Socialist, and independent member of Parliament, who reached the doors of the House of Commons by strategy. The House was solemnly debating a bill to prevent children from smoking cigarettes, when the women dashed past the doorkeeper to a position in front of the Speaker's chair and shouted: "Leave off discussing children and talk about women."

Invader Carried Out. Three officials seized Mrs. Symons and carried her out bodily. She was then led to the outer door and dismissed. As a result of the coup an order was issued that hereafter women shall not be admitted to the building on any pretext whatever, and in future the historic grill will not screen feminine spectators.

The appeal issued by the suffragettes a few days ago for 50,000 persons to help them "rush" Parliament at 7:30 this evening was the most successful stroke yet. Not less than twice that number responded to the call, and nine-tenths of these were young persons who came to see the fun. There were also a few hundred of the unemployed and their sympathizers.

Parliament in State of Siege. Parliament was in a state of siege. A close triple line of police was drawn around the three sides in front of the buildings, the yard within the gates swarmed with police and 200 guarded the terrace in the rear against assault by water, which the women twice attempted. A small fleet of police boats also patrolled the Thames.

All the mounted police in London and suburbs had been mobilized at this center and loads of hay were unstacked in the streets for the horses. The whole police force, together with cavalry, infantry and marines, numbering more than 5000, was kept busy in restraining and pushing the struggling masses about Trafalgar square.

The crowds cheered, sang songs and hooted in a semi-good-natured manner at the suffragettes, who, distinguished by their orange sashes, swarmed everywhere, distributing tracts. Women Try a Charge. A delegation of thirteen suffragettes, which approached the police cordon and was formally refused admission to Parliament, attempted a football rush, but the police chivalrously repulsed the women with the least possible roughness. The police were pelted with vegetables and some stones in a few minor skirmishes that occurred, but nobody was seriously hurt. Twenty-four suffragettes and twelve of the unemployed were placed under arrest. Many persons fainted in the crush, and a few were trampled upon and taken to the hospitals.

Mrs. Pankhurst, Miss Christobel Pankhurst and Mrs. Lawrence were summoned to appear in court yesterday for inciting a breach of the peace. This morning they coolly refused to obey the summons, but agreed to surrender themselves at 6 o'clock in the evening, which they did, spending the night in the Bow-street Station. The suffragettes and unemployed have kept practically the whole police force on duty continuously for forty-eight hours.

INCREASED SPEED IN WARSHIP COALING

Modern Naval Station Would Facilitate Work

When the proposed Navy Yard at Pearl Harbor is an accomplished fact, the coaling of warships at this port will be an easy matter compared with what it now is. Though, considering the circumstances, the coaling of the cruiser squadron was made in almost record time, the work was slow compared with what would be possible with a thoroughly up-to-date coaling station on the island.

The average speech which the vessels made was 1000 tons a day. As the ships had to tie up at the docks, and, in consequence, coal could be taken from one side only, the speed made is considered first class. It does not approach the speed possible where the vessels coal from lighters at anchorage, however.

According to one who is thoroughly conversant with the methods adopted in the coaling of warships, it is easily within the bounds of possibility to put 400 tons of coal on board a warship every hour where the proper facilities are provided.

A ship is anchored, and great lighters are moored alongside on both the port and starboard sides. The modern ships are provided with facilities for handling coal from both sides and it can be taken on board with great rapidity. As fast as one lighter is emptied, another, already loaded, is brought alongside. Four lighters will provide enough coal for the largest ship.

Honolulu is very important as a coaling station. Not only do the American warships all coal here "en passant," but foreign ships do so as well.

International courtesy requires that all visiting warships be provided with the same facilities for coaling as are accorded American ships. To the naval officials falls the task of arranging for the coaling and providing the coal, loaded on barges, in such shape that it can readily be taken on board the visiting vessels.

The local naval station arranged for the coaling of the Catalina and will perform the same office for the Puglia while she is here. Under the present conditions this entails considerable trouble to the officials, but, with a modern coaling station, the work would be trifling.

Catarrh of Hot Countries.

In cold countries catarrh usually affects the head, throat or lungs.

But there is a form of catarrh quite as serious and usually of a more acute form, which holds sway in hot countries, such as Texas, Mexico and a large portion of South America. This form of catarrh affects the alimentary canal.

The stomach, liver, bowels and kidneys are the principal organs affected.

While it is true that occasionally in hot countries catarrh of the nose or catarrh of the head occurs, it is also true that in cold countries during the warm seasons catarrh of the abdominal organs is frequent.

It remains a fact, however, that catarrh of the respiratory organs is characteristic of cold countries, while catarrh of the alimentary canal and abdominal organs is characteristic of hot countries.

Words of Gratitude.

Mr. M. S. Rodriguez, Vaqueros, S. L. P., Mexico, in a recent letter to The Peruna Drug Mfg. Co., writes:

"Since the age of eight years I have suffered with chronic catarrh."

"I consulted different well-known doctors and took many remedies, but nothing helped me permanently. Finally one of your booklets, 'The Ills of Life,' reached my hands, and seeing that other cases just like mine were being treated with Peruna, I decided to take it."

"After taking three bottles, I considered myself entirely well."
